The unbroken chain that links Carlingford Parish, including Omeath, Carlingford Town and Cooley with Saint John, New Brunswick, Canada

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION: The unbroken link between the Cooley Peninsula and Saint John, New Brunswick. Canada

PERSONAL STORIES of finding one's roots in Carlingford Parish from:

1 ANN BRENNAN, an author, social historian, member of the Canadian Association of Irish Studies and the Writers Federation of New Brunswick.
" My first recollection of Ireland began in childhood when my father would regale me with stories of a thatched cottage, a hawthorne bush where fairies played and mountains sweeping down to the sea" … READ MORE

2 PAT QUINN, a retired harbour pilot from a family of Saint John Harbour Pilots since the early 1800s.
"An ocean apart and centuries passed but the small community was the same as home! Ghee's you have to love it…..There is this unexpected weight/pull on me that doesn't go away until I am back in Cooley and Ulster …READ MORE

3 PETER MURPHY, a professional researcher, genealogist and author.
"My family could be conceived of as a great oak or maple, rooted in the soil of South End, Saint John, to whose trunk limbs and textures were grafted…., nonetheless, essentially a Cooley tree … READ MORE

CHAIN MIGRATION from CARLINGFORD PARISH to SAINT JOHN, NB - the hows and whys.

LIFE IN CARLINGFORD PARISH ON THE COOLEY PENINSULA in the early to mid 1800s - a look at the social-economic and political situations that precipitated a mass immigration over decades

LIFE IN SAINT JOHN, NB in the early to mid 1800s - a look at the situation and challenges facing the immigrants from the Cooley peninsula upon their arrival.

LIST OF FAMILIES and INDIVIDUALS who immigrated between 1820 and 1870, a brief note to help identify the family members living in the Carlingford area and an Alphabetical Index.

THE COOLEY EMIGRANT EXPERIENCE in SAINT JOHN - a talk by Peter Murphy, 1989